IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

A.D., a minor, et al.,

No. C 07-5483 SI

Plaintiffs,

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFFS’ SUPPLEMENTAL MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS’ FEES AND COSTS

v.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY
PATROL, et al.,

Defendants.

Now before the Court is plaintiffs’ supplemental motion for attorneys’ fees and expenses. For the reasons set forth below, the Court GRANTS plaintiffs’ motion. Docket No. 173.

BACKGROUND

A jury trial was held in this wrongful death case from April 27 - May 7, 2009. The jury found in favor of plaintiffs A.D. and J.E. on their claim that defendant Markgraf violated their Fourteenth Amendment rights by unlawfully depriving them of their liberty interest in their family relationship with their mother, Karen Eklund. In a bifurcated damages phase, the jury awarded $30,000 to each plaintiff. The Court entered final judgment on May 8, 2009, and by order filed June 23, 2009, denied defendant’s renewed motion for judgment as a matter of law and motion for a new trial. On July 9, 2009, defendant filed a notice of appeal.

In an order filed November 10, 2009, the Court granted plaintiffs’ motion for attorneys’ fees and costs. The Court rejected defendant’s argument that the fee award should be reduced because plaintiffs had achieved “limited success” at trial:

1 Although plaintiffs did not obtain substantial monetary damages, they received 2 much more than the nominal damages urged by defendant. Moreover, “[s]uccess is 3 measured not only by the amount of the recovery but also in terms of the significance 4 of the legal issue on which the plaintiff prevailed and the public purpose the litigation 5 served.” Morales v. City of San Rafael, 96 F.3d 357, 365 (9th Cir. 1996). Plaintiffs 6 fully prevailed on their claims at trial, and in so doing vindicated their constitutional 7 rights. Wrongful death cases such as the instant one present questions of vital 8 importance to the public. In addition to obtaining relatively modest damages, plaintiffs 9 achieved “significant nonmonetary results” in that the jury’s verdict will likely deter 10 defendant Markgraf from engaging in future unconstitutional conduct. See id. at 365.
11 Because of the significance of the legal issues and the deterrent effect of this case, the 12 Court rejects defendant’s contention that the lodestar should be reduced due to the 13 discrepancy between the damages claimed in the litigation and the damages awarded.

8 Defendant also asserts that “the low verdict amount is not explained by the 9 difficulty or complexity of the case,” and that the lodestar should be reduced because 10 this was “a straightforward police shooting case.” Defendant’s current position that 11 this case was simple is belied by the vigorous defense of this case; defendants moved 12 to dismiss, moved for summary judgment, contested liability at trial, and filed post-trial
13 motions seeking judgment as a matter of law and a new trial. Contrary to defendant’s 14 assertions, this case was factually and legally complicated, and posed numerous 15 challenges for plaintiffs. Plaintiffs had to overcome defendants’ assertion of qualified 16 immunity, and had to establish that defendant Markgraf acted with a purpose to harm 17 unrelated to a legitimate law enforcement objective, a very high standard. The only 18 witnesses to the incident were law enforcement officers, and there were factual 19 disputes about whether Eklund was attempting to run over officers when she was shot.
20 The complexity of the case is illustrated by the fact that defendants retained several 21 experts and prepared sophisticated and complicated video and computerized 22 reconstructions of the car chase and events leading up to the shooting.

16 Docket No. 144 at 3-4 (footnote omitted). Citing McCown v. City of Fontana, 565 F.3d 1097, 1102 (9th 17 Cir. 2009), the Court also held that it could not consider the parties’ settlement negotiations in 18 determining a reasonable fee. See id. at 4. The Court awarded plaintiffs their lodestar and denied 19 plaintiffs’ request for a multiplier. Defendant appealed the fee order.

20 The merits and fees appeals were briefed, and on November 30, 2010, the Ninth Circuit held oral 21 argument. On April 6, 2011, the Ninth Circuit issued its first opinion in this case. Docket No. 157. In 22 a published opinion, the Ninth Circuit reversed the judgment and held that defendant was entitled to 23 qualified immunity, and vacated the fee order in light of the disposition on the merits. A.D. v. Markgraf, 24 636 F.3d 555 (9th Cir. 2011). On April 20, 2011, plaintiffs filed a petition for rehearing en banc. On 25 May 10, 2011, the Ninth Circuit directed defendant to file a response. Docket No. 158. The Ninth 26 Circuit granted plaintiffs leave to file a reply, which plaintiffs filed on June 12, 2011. Docket No. 160.

27 On April 11, 2012, the Ninth Circuit withdrew its original opinion and issued an order directing 28 supplemental briefing. Docket No. 161. The Ninth Circuit directed the parties to answer two questions:

1 (1) “How should the qualified immunity framework be applied based on the jury’s finding that 2 Defendant-Appellant violated Plaintiffs-Appellees’ Fourteenth Amendment right to a familial 3 relationship?”; and (2) “Does the subjective requirement in this case that the Defendant-Appellant act 4 with a purpose to harm unrelated to a legitimate law enforcement objective in order to violate the 5 Plaintiffs-Appellees’ Fourteenth Amendment right to familial association affect the qualified immunity 6 inquiry?” Id. The parties filed supplemental briefs, and on September 18, 2012, the Ninth Circuit held 7 a second argument on the appeals.

8 On April 3, 2013, the Ninth Circuit issued a new published opinion affirming this Court’s denial 9 of defendant’s motion for judgment as a matter of law. See A.D. v. California Highway Patrol, 712 F.3d 10 446 (9th Cir. 2013). The Court of Appeals held that there was sufficient evidence to support the jury’s 11 verdict that defendant shot Karen Eklund with a purpose to harm unrelated to a legitimate law 12 enforcement objectives, and therefore that defendant was not entitled to qualified immunity.

13 The Ninth Circuit also reversed and remanded the fee award “so that the district court may 14 consider the amounts of Markgraf’s settlement offers in determining a reasonable fee . . . in light of an 15 intervening change in Ninth Circuit law holding that Federal Rule of Evidence 408 does not bar district
16 courts in the Ninth Circuit from considering amounts discussed in settlement negotiations as evidence 17 of the extent of the plaintiff’s success.” Id. at 460-61 (citing In re Kekauoha–Alisa, 674 F.3d 1083, 18 1093-94 (9th Cir. 2012); Ingram v. Oroudjian, 647 F.3d 925, 927 (9th Cir. 2011)). The court further 19 instructed:

20 On remand, the district court has the discretion (1) to consider the amounts 21 discussed in settlement negotiations, or not; and (2) to give those amounts as much 22 or as little weight as it sees fit. See Lohman v. Duryea Borough, 574 F.3d 163, 169 23 (3d Cir.2009) (acknowledging that settlement offers are “clearly only one factor to 24 be considered in the award of fees,” and that the district court “is also free to reject 25 such evidence as not bearing on success”); cf. In re Kekauoha-Alisa, 674 F.3d at 26 1093-94; Ingram, 647 F.3d 925 (adopting Lohman’s holding that Federal Rule of 27 Evidence 408 does not bar consideration of settlement offers when making 28 attorneys’ fee awards). It is not our place to opine as to how that discretion should be exercised.

Id. at 461.

The plaintiffs filed a motion to transfer consideration of attorneys’ fees for the appeal to this Court. The Ninth Circuit granted the motion as to the merits appeal, but ruled that plaintiffs are not

1 entitled to fees for the appeal of the fee award.

2 In August 2013, defendant filed a petition for writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme 3 Court. On November 4, 2013, the Supreme Court denied the petition. Markgraf v. A.D., No. 13-365, 4 2013 WL 5297886 (U.S. Nov. 4, 2013).

6 DISCUSSION

7 Plaintiffs seek attorneys' fees and expenses, broken down as follows: (1) the original fee award 8 pre-appeal of $559,861.45 (merits fees of $489,631.00; merits expenses of $6,402.59; fees for original 9 fee petition of $63,490.00; and fees expenses of $337.86); (2) merits appeal work in the amount of 10 $288,080.00; (3) work on the supplemental fee petition in the amount of $57,428.90 (fees of $57,285.00 11 and expenses of $143.90); (4) post-appeal merits work of $580.00; and (5) fees related to defendant's 12 petition for certiorari to the United States Supreme Court in the amount of $3,012.50. In support of the 13 supplemental fee petition, plaintiffs have incorporated their submissions from the original fee petition, 14 and submitted supplemental declarations from John Scott and Thomas Greerty, Amitai Schwartz, and 15 Moira Duvernay. Mr. Scott and Mr. Greerty were trial counsel and the primary lawyers on the merits 16 appeal until the Ninth Circuit issued its first decision reversing the judgment. Mr. Schwartz initially 17 represented the plaintiffs on the appeal of the fee award, and provided editing and consulting support 18 on the first phase of the merits appeal. After the Ninth Circuit reversed the judgment in this case, Mr.
19 Schwartz took the lead in drafting the petition for rehearing and on the subsequent merits appeal work.
20 Ms. Duvernay is an associate at Mr. Schwartz's office and she worked on both the appeal and the 21 supplemental fee petition. The lawyers' declarations describe their professional experience and their 22 work on this case, and they have submitted summaries of the time they spent on this case, as well as a 23 listing of expenses incurred. In support of the hourly rates sought, plaintiffs have also submitted the 24 declaration of Steven Mayer, a director of the firm of Howard, Rice, Nemerovski, Canady, Falk &
25 Rabin, evidence regarding hourly rates charged by Bay Area lawyers, and recent court decisions 26 awarding Bay Area lawyers fees.

27 Under 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b), the Court has discretion to award plaintiffs their reasonable 28 attorneys' fees and expenses. Reasonable attorneys' fees are determined by the "lodestar method,"

1 which is obtained by multiplying the number of hours reasonably expended on litigation by a reasonable 2 hourly rate. Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424 (1983). In determining the appropriate number of hours
3 to be included in a lodestar calculation, the Court should exclude hours “that are excessive, redundant, 4 or otherwise unnecessary.” Id. at 434. “The party seeking the award should provide documentary 5 evidence to the court concerning the number of hours spent, and how it determined the hourly rate(s) 6 requested.” McCown v. City of Fontana, 565 F.3d 1097, 1102 (9th Cir. 2009).

8 I. Level of success/consideration of settlement negotiations

9 In opposition to the supplemental fee petition, defendant argues that the previous fee award 10 should be reduced because plaintiffs’ level of success at trial “never came close to exceeding any of their 11 pretrial demands or the settlement negotiations.” Docket No. 181 at 4:6-7. Defendant relies on the 12 declaration of Tom Blake, who represented defendant throughout the pretrial proceedings and at trial.
13 Mr. Blake describes the parties’ negotiations and settlement demands made by plaintiffs, and states that 14 the parties discussed settlement in the range of $100,000 to $300,000, and that Mr. Scott “indicated an 15 interest” in a settlement of $75,000 per plaintiff and $100,000 in attorneys’ fees. Blake Decl. ¶¶ 5-6.
16 It is undisputed that defendant never made plaintiffs a settlement offer. However, defendant argues that 17 plaintiffs never agreed to a “potential settlement” that was more than double the amount that each 18 plaintiff received at trial, and thus their lodestar should be reduced to reflect their limited monetary 19 success.

20 Plaintiffs respond that the Court should exercise its discretion and give no weight to amounts 21 discussed in the settlement negotiations for two reasons. First, plaintiffs argue that this Court has 22 already determined that plaintiffs achieved significant nonmonetary success vindicating their 23 constitutional rights and serving the public purpose of deterring the unlawful use of deadly force, and 24 they cite numerous cases for the proposition that the lodestar should not be reduced when civil rights 25 plaintiffs achieve modest monetary success but significant nonmonetary success. Second, plaintiffs 26 argue that the Court should not reduce the lodestar on account of the parties’ settlement negotiations 27 because defendant never made a settlement offer. Plaintiffs note that the Ninth Circuit’s instructions 28 on remand were explicit: “We reverse and remand the fee award so that the district court may consider

1 the amounts of Markgraf's settlement offers in determining a reasonable fee." A.D., 712 F.3d at 460
2 (emphasis added). Plaintiffs argue that defendant cannot now claim that this case could have settled for 3 an amount that he never offered, and they argue that the cases cited in the Ninth Circuit's decision and 4 relied on by defendant are all distinguishable because they involved plaintiffs who rejected settlement 5 offers. See Lohman v. Duryea Borough, 574 F.3d 163, 169 (3d Cir. 2009) (plaintiff rejected three 6 settlement offers, one of which was six times the amount ultimately awarded by the jury); see also In 7 re Kekauoha-Alisa, 674 F.3d at 1094 ("Therefore, the bankruptcy court may consider evidence of a 8 settlement offer to the degree such evidence is relevant to the calculation of reasonable attorneys' fees 9 under Hawaii law."); Ingram, 647 F.3d at 927 (plaintiff rejected $30,000 settlement offer, leading to 10 further litigation, and ultimately settled for $30,000).

11 The Court exercises its discretion and concludes that amounts discussed in the parties' settlement 12 negotiations do not bear on an evaluation of plaintiffs' success in this case. See Lohman, 574 F.3d at 13 169 (acknowledging that settlement offers are "clearly only one factor to be considered in the award of 14 fees," and that the district court "is also free to reject such evidence as not bearing on success"). As the 15 Court found in its original fee order, plaintiffs fully prevailed on their constitutional claims at trial and 16 the verdict serves the important public purpose of deterrence. "Success is measured not only by the 17 amount of the recovery but also in terms of the significance of the legal issue on which the plaintiff 18 prevailed and the public purpose the litigation served." Morales v. City of San Rafael, 96 F.3d 357, 365 19 (9th Cir. 1996). The Ninth Circuit has expressed "difficulty imagining a more important issue than the 20 legality of state-sanctioned force resulting in death. It is obviously of supreme importance to anyone 21 who might be subject to such force. But it is also of great importance to a law enforcement officer who 22 is placed in a situation where deadly force may be appropriate." Mahach-Watkins v. Depee, 593 F.3d 23 1054, 1062 (9th Cir. 2010) (affirming attorneys' fee award in wrongful death case where the jury found 24 in favor of the plaintiff but awarded only nominal damages). Because this case was about much more 25 than money damages, the Court finds that the parties' settlement negotiations are not probative of 26 evaluating plaintiffs' success at trial.

27 Further, to the extent that the Court assesses success by looking at plaintiffs' monetary recovery, 28 the parties' settlement negotiations are not helpful because defendant did not actually make a settlement

1 offer, and thus defendant's assertion that this case could have settled for $75,000 per plaintiff is entirely 2 speculative.

3 Accordingly, the Court reaffirms the previous pre-appeal fee award in its entirety. Interest is 4 awarded on the original award of merits fees and expenses from May 8, 2009, the date of the judgment, 5 and on the fees for the fee petition from November 10, 2009, when the order awarding fees was filed.

6 7 II. Merits Appeal

8 Plaintiffs seek $288,080.00 for time spent on the merits appeal. Defendant objects to counsel's 9 requested hourly rates, and contends that some of the time spent was unnecessary and duplicative.

10 11 A. Hourly rates

12 A court awarding attorney fees must look to the prevailing market rates in the relevant 13 community. See Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 895 (1984); Bell v. Clackamas County, 341 F.3d 858, 14 860 (9th Cir. 2003). Plaintiffs seek to be compensated at their 2013 hourly rates for the time spent on 15 the merits appeal beginning in 2010. Plaintiffs seek $725 per hour for Mr. Greerty, Mr. Scott and Mr.
16 Schwartz, and $425 per hour for Ms. Duvernay. In 2009, the Court awarded $600 per hour for each of 17 the senior attorneys, and $300 per hour for Ms. Duvernay.¹ Mr. Greerty has 34 years experience 18 practicing law, Mr. Scott has 37 years experience, Mr. Schwartz has over 40 years experience, and Ms.
19 Duvernay has 9 years of experience.

20 Defendant contends that it is unreasonable to award 2013 rates for work largely performed in 21 2010 and 2011. However, the Supreme Court has held that an enhancement for delay in payment, where 22 appropriate, is part of calculating a "reasonable" fee under Section 1988:

23 Clearly, compensation received several years after the services were rendered – as it 24 frequently is in complex civil rights litigation – is not equivalent to the same dollar 25 amount received reasonably promptly as the legal services are performed, as would 26 normally be the case with private billings. We agree, therefore, that an appropriate adjustment for delay in payment – whether by the application of current rather than historic hourly rates or otherwise – is within the contemplation of the statute.

27
28 ¹ By reaffirming the previous fee award, the Court awards fees for that portion of counsel's work at the 2009 rates.

1 Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 283-84 (1989); see also Bell, 341 F.3d at 868 (citing Jenkins and 2 holding that “[t]he court may also award rates at an attorney’s current rate where appropriate to 3 compensate for the lengthy delay in receiving payment”). Here, the Court finds it appropriate to award 4 2013 rates for the merits appeal work because of the substantial delay in payment.

5 Defendant also contends that the 2013 rates sought are unreasonable because those rates are 6 twenty and forty percent above the 2009 rates. Defendant cites the Laffey Matrix, the formulaic 7 attorneys’ fees schedule used in the District of Columbia, to argue that “reasonable rate increases do not 8 exceed ten to fifteen percent over a period of four years.” Docket No. 181 at 9:10-12. However, the 9 Ninth Circuit has questioned the relevance of the Laffey Matrix to determining a reasonable rate in the 10 Bay Area. See Prison Legal News v. Schwarzenegger, 608 F.3d 446, 454 (9th Cir. 2010) (“But just 11 because the Laffey matrix has been accepted in the District of Columbia does not mean that it is a sound 12 basis for determining rates elsewhere, let alone in a legal market 3,000 miles away. It is questionable 13 whether the matrix is a reliable measure of rates even in Alexandria, Virginia, just across the river from 14 the nation’s capital.”).

15 In any event, the question is not whether the percentage increase from 2009 to 2013 is too great, 16 but rather whether the 2013 rates sought are reasonable and within the prevailing market rates. Plaintiffs 17 have shown that those rates are reasonable for attorneys with similar or less experience than plaintiffs’ 18 counsel. See Supp. Mayer Decl. ¶¶ 2-6 (1974 law school graduate practicing at Arnold & Porter, LLP
19 in San Francisco charges $910 per hour; current hourly rates for attorneys who graduated between 1972 20 and 1978 range between $800-$875; standard rate for 2004 graduate is $625 per hour); Supp. Req. for 21 Judicial Notice, Ex. 4 (exhibit to declaration filed in Apple Inc. v. Samsung Elec. Co., Case No. 11-cv-
22 01846-LHK (PSG), showing that “average partner rate” at Quinn Emanuel Urquhart & Sullivan, LLP 23 is $821 per hour and “average associate rate” is $448 per hour). The requested rates are also in line with 24 those awarded in recent fee awards, and indeed some of those fee awards show that the rates sought are 25 comparable to market rates approved for work performed in 2010 and 2011, and earlier. See Recouvreur
26 v. Carreon, 940 F. Supp. 2d 1063, 1070 (N.D. Cal. 2013) (approving $700 hourly rate for public interest 27 lawyer with 20 years of experience); Armstrong v. Brown, 805 F. Supp. 2d 918, 921 (N.D. Cal. 2011) 28 (approving 2010 rates of $700 per hour for 1978 and 1980 law graduates and between $325-$480 for

1 attorneys graduating between 2003-2008); Campbell v. Nat'l Passenger R.R. Corp., 718 F. Supp. 2d
2 1093, 1099-1100 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (finding reasonable $700 hourly rate for civil rights attorney
3 practicing since 1982); see also Prison Legal News, 608 F.3d 455 (holding district court did not abuse 4 its discretion in awarding 2008 hourly rates of $875 for a partner, $700 for an attorney with 23 years of 5 experience, and $425 for a 2003 law graduate).

7 B. “Unnecessary or redundant” time

8 Next, defendant challenges as unnecessary or redundant the following time spent on the merits 9 appeal: (1) time spent by Scott, Greerty and Schwartz reviewing the excerpts of record; (2) time spent 10 by Schwartz and Greerty editing the original answering brief written by Scott; and (3) time spent by 11 Scott and Greerty preparing for the original appellate argument and by Schwartz preparing for the 12 supplemental oral argument. Defendant argues that some of this “redundant” time was expended as a 13 result of the switch from Scott to Schwartz as the lead counsel handling the merits appeal (such as the 14 time spent reviewing the excerpts of record), and other time is simply excessive and unnecessary (such 15 as the time spent editing and preparing for oral argument).

16 “Participation of more than one attorney does not necessarily amount to unnecessary duplication 17 of effort.” Democratic Party of Washington State v. Reed, 388 F.3d 1281, 1286 (9th Cir. 2004). As the 18 Ninth Circuit has instructed,

19 The court may reduce the number of hours awarded because the lawyer 20 performed unnecessarily duplicative work, but determining whether work is 21 unnecessarily duplicative is no easy task. When a case goes on for many years, a lot of 22 legal work product will grow stale; a competent lawyer won't rely entirely on last year's, 23 or even last month's, research: Cases are decided; statutes are enacted; regulations are 24 promulgated and amended. A lawyer also needs to get up to speed with the research 25 previously performed. All this is duplication, of course, but it's necessary duplication; it is inherent in the process of litigating over time. Here, there was a previous appeal (of the district court's grant of summary judgment) which would have added to the delay and rendered much of the research stale. One certainly expects some degree of duplication as an inherent part of the process. There is no reason why the lawyer should perform this necessary work for free.

26 It must also be kept in mind that lawyers are not likely to spend unnecessary time 27 on contingency fee cases in the hope of inflating their fees. The payoff is too uncertain, 28 as to both the result and the amount of the fee. It would therefore be the highly atypical civil rights case where plaintiff's lawyer engages in churning. By and large, the court should defer to the winning lawyer's professional judgment as to how much time he was required to spend on the case; after all, he won, and might not have, had he been more

1 of a slacker.

2 Moreno v. City of Sacramento, 534 F.3d 1106, 1112 (9th Cir. 2008).

3 The issues in this case were difficult and complex, and litigation of the appeal was especially 4 complicated. The decision to change lead counsel after the initial loss on appeal was a strategic choice 5 that brought a fresh perspective to the issues raised on rehearing and in the supplemental briefing. After 6 the Ninth Circuit's initial 3-0 decision reversing the judgment, plaintiffs faced the formidable task of 7 persuading the Ninth Circuit to reconsider its decision. That plaintiffs were successful in doing so, 8 resulting in a 3-0 published decision affirming the judgment, validates plaintiffs' counsel's decisions 9 about how to staff and litigate the appeal. The Court also notes that Schwartz and Duvernay do not seek 10 to be compensated for all of the time they spent on the merits appeal. See Second Supp. Schwarz Decl.
11 ¶¶17-18. Defendant has not shown that any of the work performed was unnecessary, and considering 12 the complexity of this case it is reasonable that plaintiffs' counsel would need to ensure that they were 13 familiar with the district court record, review and edit pleadings prepared by others, and prepare 14 assiduously for important oral arguments. The Court is satisfied that the fees requested are reasonable 15 and justified by the results obtained, and finds it inappropriate and unnecessary to speculate about 16 whether different staffing decisions would have led to the same results at a lower cost.

17 Accordingly, the Court grants plaintiffs' request for fees for the merits appeal, and interest is 18 awarded on the merits appeal fees from May 24, 2013, the date the mandate of the Court of Appeals was 19 filed in this Court. Docket No. 169.

20 21 III. Supplemental fee petition

22 Plaintiffs seek $57,428.90 in fees and expenses incurred in litigating the supplemental fee 23 petition. Defendant generally objects that the amount of time spent on the supplemental fee petition 24 "appears distorted" because counsel spent at as much time on the supplemental fee petition as Scott and 25 Greerty spent on the merits appeal. Defendant does not identify any specific time that he contends was 26 unnecessary or unreasonable.

27 As an initial matter, the Court notes that the vast majority of the time spent on the supplemental 28 fee petition was performed by Ms. Duvernay, the attorney with the lowest hourly rate. The Court also

1 finds that simply comparing the time spent on the fee motion and time spent on one part of the merits 2 appeal does not establish that the time spent on the supplemental fee motion was excessive. See Golden
3 Gate Audubon Soc., Inc. v. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 732 F. Supp. 1014, 1022 (N.D. Cal. 1989) 4 (rejecting as unpersuasive “summary opposition” that fees on fees were excessive based solely on 5 comparison to merits time because “[r]igid comparisons with the amount of fees for the merits shed little 6 light” on determining “what is a reasonable number of hours in light of the issues and tasks involved.”).
7 The Court finds that the time spent litigating the supplemental fee petition was reasonable because 8 plaintiffs have the burden of supporting the rates sought and time spent, and they were required to 9 review pertinent legal authority, obtain declarations, gather and present time records, research current 10 hourly rates for Bay Area attorneys, and prepare the motion papers. The Court finds it noteworthy that 11 defendant did not identify any particular time spent as excessive or unnecessary, instead relying on a 12 blanket objection. Further, due to defendant’s tenacious litigation of the fee issue, plaintiffs’ counsel 13 was required “to expend significantly more time on fee issues than would have otherwise been 14 required.” Id.

15
16 IV. Other fees and expenses

17 Plaintiffs seek post-appeal merits work of $580.00, and fees related to defendant’s petition for 18 certiorari to the United States Supreme Court in the amount of $3,012.50. Defendant does not object 19 to these amounts, and the Court finds that these fees are reasonable and recoverable.
